

Managing

America's Most Trustworthy Companies

By Forbes.com staff, Electronically reprinted from March 27, 2007

Audit Integrity, an independent Los Angeles firm that does research on corporate governance best practice (and which is a data supplier to Forbes.com), has drawn up its first list of 100 American companies that, in its judgment, “showed the highest degree of accounting transparency and fair dealing to stake-holders during 2006.”

Using financial and nonfinancial measures designed originally to monitor the factors associated with fraud or financial misrepresentation, Audit Integrity constructs an Accounting and Governance Risk score for each company. Full details of the methodology can be found at www.auditintegrity.com/methodology.
